

WILL WAR COME

Hungary's Minister, Lamenting Nation's Losses In Great War, Says No New War Near.

"NEW ORDER NEEDED"

Admiral Horthy Believes Europe Should Undergo Reorganization.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary, believed a year ago that war was certain to come. Now, he tells H. R. Knickerbocker in this article of the series "Will War Come," he believes there will be no war at all.

BUDAPEST, March 5.—His serene highness, the Regent of Hungary, Admiral Horthy De Nagybanya is not a king by title, but he is a monarch in fact and surroundings. The regent believes that Europe, like a vest that has been buttoned up wrongly, needs to be "unbuttoned and buttoned up right again."

His palace rises above the Danube, splendid, wide, high, big as a mountain. This has been the regent's seat for the last fourteen years. It will probably be his seat until he dies. While he is there the regency has all the authority of the crown, and considerably more authority. His serene highness is the undisputed lord of the land.

Sentries present arms at the barracks on the way to the palace. Sentries present arms at the gate. Sentries present arms at the palace entrance. A non-commissioned officer leads the way past other sentries to the door of the regent's apartments. Before the door is a magnificent figure in scarlet and gold and helmet, pike and shield. A magyar body-guard.

FORM DEFENSE LINE

In the first anteroom an officer in naval uniform receives. The regent was an active admiral. In the second anteroom a group of officers in the violet jackets of the cavalry form the last line of defense.

The regent himself is more simply clad than any of his aides save the naval officer. The regent wears the plain blue uniform of an admiral. A single white decoration is on his jacket.

He is hearty, friendly, open, frank, hard. He put down the Reds with a hand so strong that the third international lists him as a communist enemy number one. He looks it. But he looks above all the naval officer. Postwar Hungary has no seacoast and not a boat to its name, but its ruler still smacks of the sea. His cabinet is plain as a captain's cabin.

He is not afraid to talk. He talks slow but good English. "To put it shortly," he fired back at my opening, "last year I was certain there would be war this year. Now I think there will be no war at all."

"The grave danger," he put out a red-brown fist, "was of the so-called preventive war. Of course it would have prevented nothing, and would only have brought about in the end the same disaster that would overtake Europe after any war whether you call it 'preventive' or not."

HISTORICAL IDEA
"This idea of 'preventive' war is one of the oldest in history." The admiral exploded. "From time immemorial whenever anybody wanted to make war he always did it saying it was in order to preserve the peace. Napoleon ran around Europe fighting all day long, every day in the year, fighting everybody in sight and all the time he swore he was doing it to make peace." The admiral chuckled. "The Romans," he said, "they did it too. And of course they were right. They whipped everybody in sight and then they had peace for 300 years."

The regent looked up for a moment at the portrait of the Emperor Franz Joseph. He had been adjutant to the emperor for five years, and he called him "the best man I ever knew; the most perfect gentleman with more goodness of heart than any man I ever knew."

So the idea of preventive war is not new. Yet in the Europe of today a preventive war would be the most catastrophic mistake. It would be as disastrous for the people who started it as for the people against whom it was directed.

"But it seems now virtually certain that wiser councils have prevailed. After all, in order to carry out a war, it is necessary at any rate to believe, to have a certain conviction that you are going to win. Now who today could go to war against anybody else and say positively 'we will surely win'?"

NONE COULD AFFORD
"What combination of powers is so sure of the internal strength of each member, and of the fidelity of its allies, that it could afford to provoke a conflict with any other power or group of powers? It is a risk no responsible statesman could take, and I think it is a risk that no responsible statesman could take."

Wire to Newark Results in Alexander Arrest

Armed with a signed confession by one Lancaster man, local authorities were questioning a second, Monday, prior to filing charges in connection with the robbery of the S. C. Grant coal office. Mr. Grant's safe was wrecked, and money and a diamond ring stolen. A typewriter was also taken from the office in the robbery on Friday, Feb. 23.

Leo Alexander, 20, of 508 Pierce-st., dictated a confession Sunday evening while questioned by Prosecutor Ray W. Davis in the presence of Mayor W. B. Cady, Sheriff Charles Radcliff, Officer William McCrady, Deputy Bob Armstrong, and Court Stenographer Helen Rowe.

The confession named Curtis Walton, 24, of 112½ W. Main-st., Lancaster as the actual 'safe-cracker.' Walton has been held in the county jail since last Wednesday when he was arrested for investigation by Officer McCrady in Lancaster. Glenn Carpenter, Lancaster Rt. 3, arrested with Walton, was released when he was cleared of any guilt. He had brought Walton and Alexander to Circleville the evening of the robbery but left when they went to commit the robbery, police have learned.

Held as suspect
Police had thought Walton was connected with the robbery but did not have a strong case against him until Alexander was arrested in Newark Saturday evening. Named as a suspect, it was learned in Lancaster that a letter was written to Newark police but that obtained no action. A wire sent to the Licking-co sheriff by Mayor Cady at the instigation of Sheriff Radcliff resulted in the youth being arrested. Cady, Radcliff and McCrady went to Newark Saturday night despite the dense fog and returned Alexander to the local jail.

Questioned through part of Sunday he refused to make any statements until he finally broke. Alexander denied receiving any of the money, or seeing the ring. He saw Walton carrying what he identified as the typewriter.

Alexander said he waited outside the Grant office while Walton did the 'cracking.'

CLEARs OTHER JOBS

Not only was the Grant robbery cleared by Alexander's confession but so was the theft of Gail Wilson's and Meinhard Crites' automobiles admitted. The Wilson

DR. WYNEKOOP HURT IN FALL

Aged Woman Suffered Nausea, Strikes Head; Able to Enter Court, However.

CHICAGO, March 5.—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop suffered an attack of nausea today and in attempting to reach the bathroom from her cell in the county jail, collapsed and fell to the floor. She struck her head and severely bruised the left side of her face. She was sufficiently revived to attend court, however.

CHICAGO, March 5.—The trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop for the weird operating table murder of her comely daughter-in-law, Rheta, entered its final phase today in the criminal courtroom of Judge Harry B. Miller.

As defense lawyers prepared to rest their case shortly after the session opened Prosecutor Charles Dougherty had five rebuttal witnesses ready to testify. Each, according to the prosecutor, will attack the denial made by the aged and sickly woman physician when she testified in her own defense last week.

PIERPONT TO GO ON TRIAL

Dillinger's 'Trigger-Man' Begins Fight for Life Tuesday; Argues Over Judge.

LIMA, March 5.—With the menacing shadow of John Dillinger, America's "Public Enemy No. 1," lurking at-large in the background, officials here cautiously but determinedly moved forward today to bring the first of his three bandit gang members to trial for the murder of Sheriff Jess L. Sarker.

Arguments on an affidavit of prejudice filed against Common Pleas Judge E. E. Everett by attorneys for Harry Pierpont, the accused "trigger man" and the first scheduled to go to trial for the Sheriff's murder last October when Dillinger was liberated from the Allen-co jail, was scheduled to be heard today by Carl V. Weygandt, chief justice of the Ohio Supreme court.

Pierpont's trial is slated for tomorrow and unless some obstacle, legal or otherwise, is thrown in the way, it will be started according to schedule in a courtroom guarded to the eaves with alert, heavily-armed sentries, and with machine guns hidden in secreted nests outside, trained on every door and window.

Via the "grapevine," news of Dillinger's sensational escape from Crown Point, Ind., jail Saturday filtered through the sandbag barricades around the jail over the week-end into the closely guarded and separated cells of Pierpont and the other two Dillinger henchmen, Charles Makley and Russell Clark.

2 EXECUTED FOR KILLING OFFICER

ROCKVIEW PENITENTIARY, BELLEFONTE, Pa., March 5.—In hushed silence, broken only by prayers recited by a priest, two slayers of a Scranton policeman walked to their deaths in the state's electric chair today.

Displaying no signs of emotion, Wallace Skawinski, Scranton, walked to the chair at 7:01 a. m. he was pronounced dead at 7:05. James J. Riggs, Colchester, Conn., his convicted partner in the slaying of Patrolman Lewis Roberts, broke down under the strain.

With wavering steps, Riggs was assisted to the "death seat" at 7:07 and pronounced dead at 7:12.

Sheriff Crushed

Mrs. Holley Defiant at Criticism; Believes Sheriff's Job for Man

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 5.—The most talked about woman in the state of Indiana, Sheriff Lillian Holley, was today alternately crushed by the inexplicable escape of desperado John Dillinger and defiant because of the criticism being heaped upon her.

Looking very fatigued after two sleepless nights, Mrs. Holley was on the job directing the widespread search for the gangster who escaped from her custody Saturday. She conferred with all who had business with her, including Attorney General Philip Lutz, Jr., who came here to make a special report for Gov. Paul V. McNutt.

Mrs. Holley today was not altogether sure that a sheriff's job is one for a woman.

SEES MAN'S JOB

"I realize now this job is a man's job," she said, her voice breaking. "But just the same I am going to stick out the rest of my term which ends January 1. Then I don't know what I'll do. I'll probably retire to the farm my husband left me."

"I wanted to make good for his sake. After all, it was his job I was carrying on. I was really getting a big kick out of the responsibilities of being the state's only woman sheriff, but—I guess I'm through now."

"They are criticizing me because I am a woman," said the

OHIO RIVER FLOOD FEARS ALLEVIATED

By International News Service.
Fears of a flood in the Ohio river region were dispelled today as reports from "flood menace" cities along the river indicated that the river, although expected to rise, would not reach the flood-stage.

Spring-like weather and rains had threatened the district over the week-end when snow and ice that had choked feeder rivers and streams was released.

Reports from Portsmouth stated that highway 75 between Portsmouth and Cincinnati was flooded yesterday but that traffic had been resumed on the highway today.

The Ohio river is rising steadily at Callicott, it was said, but a crest of 35 feet—below flood level—is all that is expected.

3 THEFTS HERE

Several breaking and entering jobs confronted police today after thieves had an active week-end. The largest loss was found at the garage of William Baughan, W. Main-st., where drills, plugs, and a large number of tools were stolen. No estimate has yet been placed on the theft although it is expected to be high.

The E. E. Clifton garage was entered and a suede jacket, pair of black mittens, and a pair of gloves stolen.

The Given Oil Co. reported theft of $10 from its cash register. Entrance was gained through a rear door.

HOSPITAL NEWS

Donald Woodard, three-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Woodard, W. Mill-st. underwent an operation for hernia at Berger hospital, Monday.

Joan Mowery, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mowery, R. F. D. 4, underwent an emergency appendectomy, Saturday, at Berger hospital.

22 FILE CLAIMS

Twenty-two Pickaway-co workers filed claims for injury with the Ohio industrial commission during February.

None of the accidents were fatal and none caused permanent disability while only nine caused over seven days' lost time.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Cain, E. Main-st., announce the birth of a daughter, Sunday, at Berger hospital.

Killer Believed Hiding in Pre-Arranged Hideout in Chicago Area

McnUTT'S MAN ACTS

Believe Trusty-Guard Had Hand in Daring Escape

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 5.—A manhunt spreading over four states failed today to disclose even a hint that might guide officers to the hiding place of John Dillinger, desperado extraordinary who bluffed his way out of the fortress-like county jail with a crude wooden pistol.

Police of Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Missouri were searching for "America's most desperate outlaw," but he had vanished with the same precision and efficiency that marked his sensational escape from the jail here.

Sheriff Lillian Holley, whose ward he was, and other officers directing the search were convinced that Dillinger had found sanctuary in a pre-arranged hideout within a 75 mile radius of Chicago.

AIDED BY GUARD

Out of a maze of conflicting disclosures made by public officials here relative to the ease with which Dillinger made his escape it was revealed that the desperado's flight was made possible by the aid, either willing or unwilling, of a jail guard.

A three-way investigation of Dillinger's departure disclosed that Sam Cahoon, first of the many guards made captive by the diligent bank robber and killer, is a known casual with a police record for habitual drunkenness spreading over a 14 year period.

At the time of Saturday's jail break Cahoon, although classed as a guard and deputy sheriff, was in fact a trusty and not a recognized peace officer and was an inmate of the jail serving out his time as a handman.

Only five of the 18 guards assigned to the task of guarding Dillinger until his murder trial March 12 were de jure deputy sheriffs. Cahoon, 64 years old, was classed as one of these five.

State and county authorities were pressing the multiple investigation with Attorney General Philip Lutz, Jr., representing Gov. Paul McNutt.

Sheriff Holley, the only woman sheriff in Indiana, was conducting an independent investigation of her own while directing one phase of the manhunt for the desperado whom she says she would "like to shoot down on sight."

ASK RESIGNATION

The board of county commissioners which designated Mrs. Holley the successor to her husband's office as sheriff when he was slain a year ago announced it will demand that she resign her office today pending completion of the investigation.

From Louis Baker, day warden in command of the jail when Dillinger locked up his many guards and escaped, came the charge that a guard aided the super-desperado in his get-away.

"Only a guard would be in a position to know the exact location," he said.

WEATHER CHANGES

What a lot can happen in seven days! Only one short week ago Circleville was blanketed under eight inches of snow and suffering one of the most severe cold shocks of winter. But today, one is not surprised to get news of the perennial "first robin."

Although Spring is not officially due until March 21, spring-like temperatures were reported from throughout the state yesterday. In Circleville, for instance, mercury shed its overcoat and took a trip to the 57 degree mark as compared with zero and sub-zero readings a week ago.

The premature spring may be short-lived, however. Weather forecasters predicted slightly colder weather.

GEORGE KRAUF DIES

George W. Krauf, aged 64, was found dead in bed at the home of his sister, Mrs. Grover Boyer, Stoutsville, Monday at 7 a. m. He had been ill two months.

Mrs. Boyer is his only survivor. Funeral services will be Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Boyer residence with Rev. Cherry officiating. Burial in Maple Hill cemetery is in charge of Crites and Van Cleave.

MOSCOW, March 5.—Ten women and two children of the 101 persons stranded when the Soviet ice-breaker Chelyuskin sank in the Arctic ocean near Bering Straits Feb. 13, were rescued today by the Russian plane Ant-4 after a hundred mile flight from Wallen bay. It was officially announced.

Sawyer Avows Candidacy For Governor's Position

CINCINNATI, March 5.—In one of the shortest opening campaign statements ever issued by an Ohio candidate, Charles Sawyer, Lieutenant governor, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Sawyer's statement released from his office here said simply:

"I am a candidate for Governor." Sawyer was selected in 1932 by the state committee to run for Lieutenant governor when William G. Pickrel, the nominee, withdrew from the race. Although he had less than three months within which to campaign, he started political observers when in the November election he polled a greater majority than President Roosevelt, receiving the highest vote ever cast given to a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor. Most previous Democratic nominees for Ohio's lieutenant governorship either had been defeated or elected by the narrowest margin.

HAS BUSY CAREER

Sawyer's decision opens another chapter in a busy and versatile life which has included school teaching, practice of the law, two years in the World War, including eight months of service overseas, two terms as a member of the City Council of Cincinnati, the

CITY LEAGUE PLANS SESSION

Three Trustees To Be Elected By Organization at Tuesday Evening Meeting.

The first annual meeting of the Circleville Citizens' league will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in the parlor of the New American Hotel. An error in the caption of notices sent to members gave the date as Tuesday, March 5, and one in the body of the notice gave it as March 15.

The correct date is Tuesday, March 6. Three new trustees are to be elected for a three year term to fill the places of Ben H. Gordon, Harry W. Heffner, and Emmitt L. Crist, whose terms expire.

Reports of the executive officers and various committees covering the fiscal year will be presented. Discussion of current and future projects will also be allotted part of the evening.

A large attendance is expected. The league's officers include Harvey S. Heffner, president; F. E. Barnhill, vice president; Harry W. Heffner, secretary, and W. H. Nelson, treasurer.

Police Court

M. L. Woodrow, Wayne-tw, was fined $200 and costs and committed to the Columbus workhouse until fine and costs are paid when he appeared before Mayor W. B. Cady, Monday, for theft of a motorometer from the automobile of Officer Karl Radcliff.

Woodrow did not pay.

Frank Barnhart, Mingo-st, paid $5 and costs to Mayor Cady, Monday, being fined for intoxication. The total amount was $13.70.

Clyde Bates, booked on the police docket as a resident of Snake Valley, was arrested by police for intoxication during the weekend. He has not yet been arraigned.

A peace warrant naming Harry Gephart has been sworn out in Mayor Cady's court by Gephart's wife. The man was released from jail last week on bond.

William Louderback, 59, of 135 Center-st, Xenia, has been lodged in the county jail by Deputy Bryan Custer on an old charge of defrauding Floyd Seymour of $100 worth of logs.

F. E. Williams, 37, 828 E. Temple-st, Washington C. H., is in the county jail charged with stealing a dog from Mose Rutter. Deputy Fissell made the arrest.

Harry Neff, 60, of Nashville, is in jail awaiting a hearing for intoxication. He was arrested by Deputy Armstrong.

WOODIN IMPROVED

NEW YORK, March 5.—William H. Woodin, first secretary of the treasury in the Roosevelt cabinet, was back at his home here today after a sojourn in a Tucson, Ariz., sanatorium, where he underwent treatment for a throat ailment.

Woodin declared his health was greatly improved, but that his voice was not yet sufficiently strong to carry on long conversations.

"NEW DEAL" TO REMAIN SAYS F.O.R.

"Recovery Agencies to Become Permanent Parts of Government"

IN NATIONAL TALK

Says Can Be No Return to "Old Conditions"

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The New Deal, as embodied in the NRA and sundry other recovery agencies, is here to stay, President Roosevelt informed the country today.

He addressed several thousand industrialists gathered here in a national conference to readjust codes, but through a national radio hook-up his audience was country-wide.

There can be no return, he said, to old conditions under which the economic interests of the country pursued a dog-eat-dog policy "and the devil take the hindmost."

Future steps toward economic recovery, he declared, call for shorter hours for labor, increased wages, stricter compliance with the codes of fair competition, increased protection for the consumer, greater self-regulation of business, and a more equitable distribution of wealth and of power.

AMUSED AT 'FASCISM'

The president said he was "amused and a little saddened" over the assertions of those who proclaim that we are headed toward either Fascism or dictatorship.

"The real truth of the matter is," he said, "that for a number of years in our country the machinery of democracy had failed to function."

"Through inertia on the part of leaders and on the part of the people themselves the operations of government had fallen into the hands of special groups, some of them vociferously led by people who undertook to obtain special advantages for special classes and others led by a handful of individuals who believed in their super-human ability to retain in their own hands the entire business and financial control over the economic and social structure of the nation."

Mr. Roosevelt accompanied his exposition of the New Deal with a ringing call for cooperation.

MOVING AHEAD

The country, he said, is moving steadily ahead to better times and what is now necessary is whole-hearted, unselfish teamwork. He called upon the business leaders to supply that.

"One year ago," he said, drawing the parallel, "we were suffering and shrinking under economic pressures so intolerable that collapse was at hand. We had arrived at the day to make our choice. The American people responded to the call for action with eager enlistment—enlistment in the struggle against ruthless selfishness, reckless greed and economic anarchy. We undertook by law, law, constitutional processes to organize a disintegrating system of production and exchange."

"The methods and details of that reorganization may and will change from year to year, but it is very certain that the American people understand that the purpose of the reorganization was not only to bring back prosperity. It was far deeper than that. The reorganization must be permanent for all the rest of our lives in that never again will we permit social conditions which

WARN THIEVES OF STOLEN BOTTLES

NEW YORK, March 10.—The police radio system today was broadcasting at intervals one of the strangest alarms in the city's history.

The warning said: "Will the thieves who stole the bottles from a parked automobile near 49th-st and 10th-ave refrain from drinking out of them in peril of their lives. These bottles contain a fluid that looks and tastes like wine. The fluid is harmless when taken in minute and medicinal quantities, but is deadly when drunk as a beverage."

The bottles were taken from the automobile of a salesman for a pharmaceutical company.

Tigers Defeated In 'Consolation'; Darby is Ousted

Playing without the guidance of their coach, Circleville high school Tigers forced Bexley into an overtime period before losing, 22-21, in the consolation round of the district class A court tournament.

Coach Pete Herberholz was called to Cincinnati by the illness of his mother.

The last time the two teams met on the C. A. C. court the Bexleyites were victorious in two overtime periods.

Darby-twp. sole Pickaway-co survivor of the first round in the district class B tournament, was eliminated by Bremen, 54-13, in the second round. Bremen is the Fairfield-co champion defeating the heretofore unbeaten Stoutsville team to get into the tournament.

The Tigers were eliminated from the tournament, Friday, losing to Columbus East by a 33-12 score.

GAME HARD FOUGHT

They fought the Bexley team tooth-and-nail before admitting defeat. It was quite a battle and at numerous times brought the crowd to its feet.

The defeat was a story of missed foul shots since the Tigers made but seven out of 15 while Bexley made six out of ten.

Darby-twp never had a chance against the hard-driving Bremen team. Bechdel, Miley and Van Atta scored at will getting 13, 15, and 20 points respectively. Gene Winfough was the only Darbyite to do anything. He scored nine points three field goals and three free throws.

Other class B games resulted; Lancaster St. Mary's, 31; Marysville, 13.

Mt. Gilead, 21; Thurston, 19; Hebron, 21; Sunbury, 19.

Centerburg, 35; Caledonia, 23; Bellepoint, 27; Hanover, 18.

Prospect, 28; Toboso, 10; Ostrander, 19; London, 16.

In the Class A tournament; Columbus East, 25; South, 18; Lancaster, 29; Columbus Central, 28.

Carnerian Haymaker That Went Astray

If this sledge-hammer right from Primo Carnera had landed on Tommy Loughran in the ninth round of their title bout at Miami, Fla., the Italian champion would undoubtedly have won more than a decision of his Philadelphia challenger. But the lighter and more agile Mr. Loughran managed to duck his mountainous opponent's heavy swings, as he did on this occasion, to last the full distance.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

THAT it doesn't take long to cut down the list of entries in a basketball tournament is seen by the fact that 150 teams remain from the group of 1,150 which started on journeys toward possible championships less than two weeks ago.

Of the eight Class A teams that met in the state tournament last year only two have been eliminated, Toledo Scott and Bellevue. Survived the defending champion, Doved the district tournament at New Concord last week and goes to Dennison this weekend to compete with Steubenville, East Liverpool, New Philadelphia and four other schools for the sectional title and the right to enter the state contest.

Some other teams remaining in the class "A" running are Marietta, undefeated this year, Lima Central, Columbus East and North, Lancaster, Newark, Dayton Fairmount, Springfield, favored to win last year but beaten in the first game by the champions; Bowling Green, Napoleon, Akron West, Cambridge, and Findlay.

By districts, four are still in the central, eight each in the eastern, northeastern, southwestern and northwestern, and 15 in the southeastern where no sectional tournament was held. This district includes Athens, Washington, C. H., Greenfield, Pomeroy, Chillicothe and a number of other schools.

Purdue, champion of the Big Ten, seeks a new scoring record tonight against Illinois. The Boilermakers have scored 486 points, a new record in itself over the 417 mark owned by Indiana, but they hope to establish a figure that will stand the onslaughts of Big Ten teams for years to come. The Big Ten closes its campaign tonight.

SAWYER

youngest member ever to sit in that body.

In addition to his state office, Sawyer is President of the school board in the little village of Glendale, where he lives. His interest in and understanding of school matters may be explained by the fact that both his father and mother were teachers, his father recently retiring after fifty-one years of service in the public schools of Hamilton, Ohio.

Following his education in the schools of Wyoming and Madisonville, Sawyer entered Oberlin college, where, despite the fact he helped to work his way through college, he completed the usual four year course in three years. Leaving college, he entered the Cincinnati Law School. Here, while studying law in the daytime, he taught high school pupils at night.

At the close of his law study he took first place in the bar examination at Columbus.

At the present time Sawyer is a member of the firm of Dymally, Shohl, Sawyer, and Dinsmore, one of the leading law firms of Cincinnati. He has had a varied and extensive practice in both office and trial work.

JOINED INFANTRY

When the United States entered the World War, Sawyer immediately entered the service, and although offered a commission in the Judge Advocate's department, declined to accept it, preferring instead to remain in the infantry branch of the service. Before the Armistice he was commissioned a Major. He is a member of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Lieutenant Governor Sawyer is interested in farm problems and owns a farm himself, where he spends considerable time. He is married, and with Mrs. Sawyer and five children lives in the Village of Glendale.

Always interested in out of door life and athletic competition, Sawyer has recently renewed his interest in sport by participating in the reorganization of the Cincinnati Reds of the National Baseball league, of which club he is now a director and the legal adviser. In high school and college his primary physical activity was boxing.

Other candidates for the Democratic nomination are William G. Pickrel and Martin L. Davey.

CITE'S SYMPATHY

"I can't explain it, no one can explain it. One thing is certain—the public sympathy he received when he was brought here did a lot to bolster up his nerve. He even had fan mail sent to him, but of course we never gave it to him.

"If there had only been some shooting, something to have given me a justifiable opportunity to fight, then this thing wouldn't be so hard to take," she lamented.

"What else could we do to hold him here? The only thing we hadn't done was to handcuff him to the cell bars day and night, and one cannot do that in the twentieth century. But don't be misled: I could kill him on sight without a moment's hesitation or compunction."

WOULD INTERVENE IN BANKRUPT CASE

COLUMBUS, March 5.—Federal Judge Benson W. Hough today took under consideration the application of Mrs. H. M. Crites of Circleville, to intervene in the bankruptcy proceedings of her husband.

Briefs in the case are expected to be submitted within the next ten days.

Mrs. Crites, in her application, asked that value of her dower rights in the land involved in the petition be set aside. The value of the dower rights is estimated at $46,000.

Thirty-five school boys and girls recently were given bronze medals and certificates of award for reporting locations of common bar-barries to Harry Atwood, in charge of barberry eradication. His address is 8 E. Broad-st., Columbus. About 400 bushes were reported and destroyed, thus helping to eliminate the source of black stem rust of small grain.

tion of doors, rooms, keys and armaments," said Baker when asked where Dillinger obtained his minute knowledge of the jail premises.

Dillinger and his companion in the jailbreak, Herbert Youngblood, a negro accused of murder, were last sighted near Peotone, Ill., about two hours after they escaped. Since then authorities have received no authentic word as to their whereabouts.

Because the pair were riding in an official automobile belonging to Sheriff Holley authorities were convinced that Dillinger and his negro companion had flown to a sedan, besides its official insignia, was equipped with red and green headlights that might lead to speedy identification if the car remained on the highways.

The toy gun which Dillinger used to cow his guards and lock them in the bull pen was whittled by the gangster from the wooden top of a washboard, Prosecutor Estill said.

"We found shavings on the floor of the cell, Dillinger's cell, the result of his whittling," Estill said. "The board was found under his straw mattress. He must have had the board in his cell more than a day to accomplish such expert results in woodwork."

Deputy Baker maintained that the cells of Dillinger and 14 other prisoners were searched carefully the day before the break, "but no sign of weapons were found, real or fancied."

Baker admitted that the desperado had razors in his cell with which to carry on his wood carving. This, he said, was because there is no barber in the jail.

With the aid of the silver-hued safety razor handle Dillinger was able to make his wooden pistol look more realistic. As the various investigations progressed Cahoon continued to hold the spotlight. It was Cahoon who opened the way for Dillinger's break for freedom when he failed to lock up the 15 prisoners, including Dillinger, in the bull pen before making his own entrance with an armful of soap for the inmates.

Prosecutor Estill was questioning the first of 43 persons today, including jail guards, prisoners and visitors to Dillinger's cell during his short incarceration here.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 5.—Wrapped in blankets, the bodies of two men taken for a "ride" were found today, lying on the edge of Faulk road, near here, with slashed throats.

A Momentous 'First Year'

AMERICA looks back upon one completed year of Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration as president, but it leaves to posterity to pass judgement upon this historic and heroic twelvemonth. It is too soon to appraise it at its real worth.

Never did an American president enter office under such handicap as awaited Mr. Roosevelt last March 4. The banks were closed. Industry was virtually at a standstill. The morale of the people was at its lowest ebb since the dark days of the Revolution. And the machinery of government had completely broken down.

Before the sun set on his inauguration day the nation knew a real helmsman had taken the wheel. And when congress convened in special session a few days later it found out what real leadership is like.

Prosperity hasn't returned but the way for its return has been paved, and largely by the initiative and courage of President Roosevelt. He dared to do, and the people took new courage and new hope.

The bank holiday, which restored financial stability; the legalization of beer, which gave business its first impetus; the Citizens Conservation Corps, which rehabilitated 300,000 young men and restored the faith of their families and themselves in humanity and government; the Home Owners Loan Corporation, which has saved the homes of countless depressed victims; the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, which salvaged the farms; the Civil World Administration, which brought the jobless millions through the winter secure from hunger and exposure; the Public World Administration, which is to take up the slack in employment from this point on; the National Recovery Act, which injected new life in industry and brought an end to the sweatshop era; all these and many others are the works of the man who now sits in the white house ministering to the wants of a people that but 12 short months ago hopelessly scanned the future.

This was the work of a man of vision and heroic strength, who will be honored and admired for it even though complete national recovery does not come in his time. One year in the white house has proved Franklin D. Roosevelt to be that "man of the hour" who has always come to the American people in their desperation and misery.

The life a young man should live depends on whether your own kids are boys or girls.

Impractical Economists

RECENTLY, many readers were impressed by a series of articles leading to the conclusion that the problems of industry could be solved only by the consumer's decision to save less and spend more. The articles admitted the theoretical propriety of reduced spending and increased saving when aggregate consumers' demand should have outrun producers' facilities. The gist of the series was that the present industrial dilemma is a producing capacity in excess of visible consumption.

To disinterested persons, the reasoning seems entirely academic. Their natural comment was that the average citizen spends or saves, and presumably will continue to do so, according to his personal character or circumstances. Therefore, while the argument that he ought to adjust his use of surplus income to preserving equilibrium in trade might be unanswerable economically, practically it would get exactly nowhere.

If permanent prosperity and absolute abolition of unemployment depend upon establishing and enforcing an exact ratio between saving and spending, society must continue to get along with alternating periods of prosperity, and hard times.

President Mendieta of Cuba has issued a decree dissolving the old army and providing for establishment of a "constitutional army." But constitutional armies in Cuba don't always stay that way.

A farm war would be just the thing in case of a tomato surplus.

“KNAVE’S GIRL”

SYNOPSIS

Fear that Bill McGee, the racketeer, would wreak vengeance on her and her family if she refused to go out with him, caused lovely Patricia Warren to accept his invitations. Bill is shot by a rival gangster while in Pat's company. Pat rushes home in terror and her stepmother puts her out, saying the police are looking for Pat. Unable to find employment, Pat resorts to her card skill and plays professional bridge. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, makes her his partner. While they are discussing business details at his home, Clark Tracy, the polo player and Pat's secret love, calls. She had met him once but he does not recognize her. Haverholt introduces Pat as his niece. She is indignant, but he explains later that he was thinking of her reputation and that it would be advisable for her to assume that role as long as she is to stay at his home. Pat visits her old home and finds that Bill McGee has wrecked her stepmother's dressmaking shop because Pat fled from him the night of the shooting. She returns to Haverholt who promises to protect her. Accustomed to poverty, Pat revels in the luxury of her surroundings. Reading an announcement of Clark's approaching marriage to Marthe March, Pat experiences pangs of jealousy. While playing bridge with two young men, Haverholt embarrasses Pat by ridiculing her game. When she retaliates by criticizing his bidding, he is furious. Pat rushes to her room in tears. Haverholt comes to her and, try as she might, Pat can't be angry with him.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Like one hypnotized Patricia heard herself agree to go downstairs, to resume the play. She had said none of the things she had planned to say; she had gained none of the promises she had planned to gain. Her rebellion had died aborning. Nor had Haverholt finished.

Clasping his hands about his knees, bending his gray eyes upon her, he said gravely:

"Every bridge team that is successful, Patricia, had a follower and a leader, a follower who is steady and conservative, a leader who provides the thrills, the psychics and the fireworks, a leader who decides the campaign, a follower who accepts his dicta unquestioningly, a leader who may be wildly unconventional, a follower who is rigidly conventional, always. We bridge players call them pitcher and catcher. Which player are you going to be, Patricia, in our team—pitcher or catcher?"

"I guess," said the girl in a small voice, "I guess I'll be the catcher."

"Right," said the man contentedly, "you are."

Her surrender was complete. She understood that, and, strangely, found no humiliation in the thought. Suddenly, strangely, Patricia knew that arrogant, insolent, egotistical as he was, she would not change Julian Haverholt. In some dim way she realized that it was better that she should be defeated always than that she should be defeated once. He would not yield in anything; he could not. He would die before he gave ground.

"Let's shake hands on it, Patricia."

Gravely she gave him her hand. "We should mark this day somehow," said Haverholt, smiling at his own drama, "this day when we reached understanding. What will you have, Patricia? A string of pearls, a diamond ring, what will you have?"

"I don't want anything," she protested, embarrassed.

"You must have something. Young girls always cherish a pet desire, don't they?"

"Very well, then," said Patricia abruptly. "I'd like a Madison roadster with wire wheels."

"Julian is crazy about you, too," Clark pursued with the kindest of impulses.

Haverholt looked at her meditatively.

"You shall have one tomorrow," he promised. "But I'd certainly like to know how your pet desire happened to take such a sudden and definite form."

Patricia did not tell him.

The next afternoon promptly at three o'clock Patricia appeared at the Madison Automobile show-rooms. Julian Haverholt had promised to meet her there. At fourteen minutes after three he had not yet arrived. Recalling his oft-repeated statement that he never waited for anyone, that people always waited for him, Patricia smiled rather grimly.

Suddenly through the plate glass windows she spied Julian Haverholt alighting from a taxi. Another man followed him to the sidewalk. They stood talking a minute, arguing, it seemed. Patricia's heart began to beat hard and fast. The second man was Clark Tracy. The two came in together.

Patricia was smiling, outwardly composed, when they approached her. She extended a slim, cool hand in greeting.

"I didn't expect to see you, Mr. Tracy."

Her tone was dignified and gracious, but her color was a little high.

"I didn't expect to be here; only I ran into Julian and he was good enough to let me come along."

"I suppose you've picked out half a dozen cars by now," commented Haverholt amusedly, enjoying her flushed cheeks and starry eyes. "This is no place to keep a young woman waiting. I should have known better."

"No, you're wrong," Patricia told him seriously. "From the very first I've settled on the yellow roadster, the one over there." She pointed. The roadster was sleek and low and flashing in the sunshine. Patricia drew a long breath. "Isn't it perfectly stunning?" she demanded.

Her voice was full of youth and rapture. The men's eyes met over her head. They smiled together.

"I should guess that you were a little excited," suggested Clark, slowly, appreciatively, looking down at her. In a kind of sudden surprise, it struck him that Haverholt's niece was an exceptionally beautiful girl. That blazing hair was perfect with her clear, petal-like skin. She was natural and unaffected, too; a charming child, all in all.

"Simply jumping up and down inside," she confessed gayly.

"A grand feeling, isn't it?"

"It's swell."

The salesman appeared, "Our Mr. Brown," suave, correct in a morning coat, wearing a gardenia in his buttonhole, a polite, unassuming man, willing to give the trio all the leisure they wished. Super-salesmanship had no place in the Madison organization. In Mr. Brown's modest estimation, he, by selling a Madison, was conferring a distinct favor upon the lucky buyer. Still, Mr. Brown was agreeably startled by the speed of this transaction.

"You needn't bother showing us anything," Haverholt informed him. "My niece has decided upon the roadster." He indicated with his stick the proper car and felt for his bill fold. "I believe I have sufficient cash and we'd like immediate delivery."

"Immediate delivery," murmured the dazed Mr. Brown, feeling the reins of authority slip out of his hands. "That's a little irregular, Mr. Haverholt," he suggested. "It usually takes us several days."

"There's no reason, is there, why Miss Haverholt can't have the car on the floor?"

"I'm afraid that isn't possible. We'd better consult the manager."

The two men disappeared into the manager's office, the salesman still a little limp, Haverholt brisk and authoritative, anxious to get the matter completed. Clark glanced significantly at Patricia.

"Julian will have his own way," he predicted.

"He will," conceded Patricia proudly.

"Your uncle is a most remarkable man."

Patricia flushed. "He is," she agreed.

"Julian is crazy about you, too," Clark pursued with the kindest of impulses. "Ordinarily, I think of him as being a self-sufficient sort of person, but on the subject of his niece he grows positively lyrical. Talked of nothing except you all the way uptown."

The conversation had taken a turn which made Patricia uneasy and anxious. She did not wish to discuss Julian Haverholt with Clark Tracy, certainly not in this fashion. She felt baffled, troubled, uncertain, a little frightened. Clark himself, seeing her confusion, not understanding it at all, shifted the channel of talk.

Just like the one you meant to make.

But homes are builded not of wood,

"Pink Eye" a Contagious Disease

While Not a Serious Affliction It Is a Rapid Spreader

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

"PINK EYE," or acute conjunctivitis as it is known medically, is a common and highly contagious disease. It is an inflammation of the eye caused by a particular kind of infection.

In the beginning the eye becomes greatly congested. That is the reason the affliction is commonly called "pink eye."

At first the eyes itch, and almost immediately they get red. These symptoms are followed by a discharge of mucus. Smarting, burning and pain may be experienced on exposure to bright lights. Fortunately, the sight is rarely affected. Ordinarily the infection runs its course within three to seven days. The catarrhal discharge may persist and the eyes remain red and itchy for several weeks.

Simple Treatment

I am glad to say that the disease, bad as the eye looks, is not a serious one and requires little treatment. A good plan is to wash the eyes with a 3 per cent solution of boric acid or a very weak solution of zinc chloride. Use an eye cup frequently and keep the eyelids free from the crusty deposits that may form.

The visible symptoms of pink eye resemble another contagious disease of the eye. This is trachoma, a much more serious infection of the eye. In the latter disease the redness of the eyes is followed by a roughness of the inner parts of the lids. When trachoma is neglected, scars form. These scars deform the eyelids, sometimes causing the eyelashes to turn in and scratch the eye ball.

It is a painful affliction and if untreated, may lead to permanent blindness. Fortunately, the disease is not a common one. Indeed, in recent years very few cases are met outside of a few localities.

The Family Towel

Trachoma, like pink eye, is extremely contagious. It is easily transmitted from one person to another. It may run through families and schools. The infection is spread by the common use of towels, wash cloths, improperly sterilized swimming pools, or by rubbing the eyes with dirty fingers.

The family towel is an abomination and should never be used. Every individual should have his own towel. This should be the rule in the home, office or school. Instruct your children never to rub their eyes with dirty fingers. If it is necessary to wipe the eyes, it should be with one's own clean handkerchief.

Bear in mind, there are diseases of the eye which, if neglected, produce blindness. Do not overlook the fact that the longer you neglect any ailment of the eye, the longer it takes to cure it. Your eyes are most precious. Never neglect them.

Magazines Join Canners in Fight Against Grading Canned Goods

WASHINGTON — The Big canning companies are bringing tremendous pressure against the Brain Trust proposal that they be required to conform to "grades and standards." This is a system where each can of meat, vegetables or any other food would carry a stamp on the outside specifying that it was "US Grade No. 1" or "No. 2," or lower. Thus the housewife could determine the quality of the goods she bought.

Pressure against this is coming not merely from the canners but from publishers of magazines of national circulation and other users of national advertising.

At the NRA hearings on the canning code, it was disclosed that when the canners borrowed money from the banks, they were required by the banks to specify the grade and standards of the products which they put up as collateral. Also Swift, with Libby, McNeil and Libby, which operate subsidiaries in Canada, conform to more rigorous Canadian laws regarding standards than those proposed by the NRA.

In other words, the canners were willing to do for the banks and for the Canadian public what they were not willing to do for the American public.

Numbers Racket

MacDuffie, the negro valet of the President, is a great fan for the Forbidden Numbers game, a mild form of underworld rackets. One day there was placed on the President's desk a letter out of which he drew four policy slips, used in the numbers game. The President called MacDuffie and addressed him with gravity.

"Now MacDuffie, when I was Governor of the State of New York I started a campaign on this sort of racket. Don't you know it is crooked? Don't you know you haven't a chance in the world of making your money on it?"

MacDuffie said nothing and walked away.

That night MacDuffie went solemnly into the private office of Colonel Louis Howe.

"Well, what's the matter MacDuffie?" inquired Howe.

Said MacDuffie with injured air: "Please Cuh'nel, I wish you

Salute Echo

In a few months General Douglas MacArthur, bemedalled Chief of Staff, will retire from that office. His four years of duty are up, he will resume a lower rank, drop down to another command in the Army.

At present, when MacArthur visits his army or naval post, or any island possession of the United States, he is entitled to a nineteen gun salute — three guns less than the President and the same number of guns as the Secretary of State.

When he ceases to be Chief of Staff, this salute — except at military posts — will no longer be accorded.

But the other day MacArthur proposed to some of his Congressional friends a new law requiring the nineteen gun salute for former chiefs of staff.

Will War Come?

sible military leader in Europe today would take.

"No, I now think not only that there will be no war, but that questions which now disturb the peace of Europe will ultimately be settled without any war at all. There is not one point of friction that could not be removed if the proper pressure were brought to bear by the great powers."

In interpretation it may be remarked that Hungary's chief aim today is to recover from the little Entente the enormous blocks of territory she lost, but particularly to recover Slovakia from Czechoslovakia. If the great powers were to bring "the proper pressure" to bear on Czechoslovakia, Hungary feels her claim might be satisfied without war.

"What we need in Europe though," went on the speaker, "is more authority. Authority is absolutely essential to the preservation of peace, because when moments of strain come, and great decisions have to be made you need your power concentrated. I agree with Mussolini that fundamental changes in the organization of Europe are essential — for the preservation of the peace."

NEED DICTATORSHIP

"The reorganization must be along lines that will permit the great powers to get together and say to any trouble-maker: 'You must behave; you must cease to do this or you must do that.' I do not mean a league army. That is not necessary. It would suffice if the great powers merely used their own forces as a threat. With such authority behind anybody I am confident that order would be restored in Europe in one day."

"But the reorganization must be thorough, and the injustices must be corrected. I cite the case of my own country. The situation in which we are today is absolutely intolerable. No civilized people could expect that we should tolerate it, and I am happy to note that the appreciation for Hungary's position is growing in England and in other countries. They recognize not only the material injustice done to us but above all the moral humiliation which is the hardest to bear."

The admiral became vehement. "We had everything, — we had coal and iron and gold and salt and oil. Now what have we got? They took away from us seventy-two per cent of our land and sixty per cent of our population. They left us nothing but wheat and soldiers. Good wheat and good soldiers have no value nowadays."

"And what makes it particularly hard to bear is the fact that Hungarians of all people are not accustomed to this sort of treatment. You as an American who comes from the south remember what the feelings of your people were when after the civil war negro governors were put in power in the southern states."

"HARD TO BEAR" "After all we Hungarians have

Girl Scout News

Circleville Girl Scout Troop No. 4 held its regular weekly meeting on Saturday afternoon in the basement of the Presbyterian church. In spite of the bad weather, we had a good attendance.

We discussed plans for the Girl Scout Birthday party to be held on March 12, at our own meeting place. All four troops of the county are invited.

After patrol corners, we held Investiture Ceremony, during which the following girls were presented with pins: Edna Briner, Virginia Dinse, Martha Dreisbach, Ruth Hill, Rosalie Hulso, Virginia Hulso, Jane Klingensmith, Betty Jane May, Evelyn Russell, Betty Weiler and Phyllis Young. Three girls have been received by transfer from other troops: Betty Sayre, Ruth Robinson and Louis Goldsberry. After singing our Hymn of Scouting, we closed with Taps.

been an organized people with a unique culture for a thousand years, and for a gentleman whose forefathers have been gentlemen for a thousand years, to be kicked out of his castle, robbed of his land, thrown on the streets, and condemned to beggary, — that is very hard to bear.

"I understand the feelings of our people. We have had to use our authority for the last fourteen years to calm the natural emotions of a people that suffers so keenly under the intolerable injustices to which they have been submitted."

I know the reality of the situation, and I know there is no one in running your head against a brick wall.

"But the patience of the people will certainly one day be rewarded, for I am convinced that revision will come by peaceful means."

WHAT OF GERMANY

"You ask what will happen when Germany is reformed. It is not necessary that anything should happen. Scorer or later the justifiable claims for revision will be granted, and there is no reason why there should be any war at all."

"But," he rurs and straightened his jacket. "First must come reorganization and revision." Pointing at his buttons, "when your vest is not buttoned correctly, you must first unbutton it all the way down in order to button it up again. Europe must be unbuttoned and then buttoned up correctly again, and then we will have that peace for which all of us in Hungary are working."

The Danube flowed away down below the palace. Its gray surface mirrored a flood of sunshine. For thousands of years it has flowed through the land of the Magyars, a proud people. It will flow another thousand years before Hungary surrenders her claims.

Tomorrow—Premier Gamboes of Hungary tells Knickerbocker another war will destroy civilization of Europe.

LOCAL PERSONS HEAR BACH ORATORIO SUNDAY

Twenty-six members of Trinity Lutheran church choir and several other persons motored to Columbus Sunday afternoon and heard the Chapel Choir and Junior Choir of Capital university sing the wellknown Bach oratorio "St. Matthew's Story of the Passion of Jesus Christ" in Mees hall at the university.

The Passion was sung last year for the first time in Columbus and promises to become an annual Lenten season event on the university campus.

In the evening members of the local choir took part in the second annual choir festival sponsored by the Directors Guild of the university and presented at Mees hall before a capacity audience.

All choirs participating were directed by present or former members of the Chapel choir. The program was climaxed with choral selections sung by a mass choir of over 700 voices directed by Rev. Ellis Snyder.

AT THE GRAND

No girl ever received a grander opportunity for her screen debut than Margaret Sullivan, popular ingénue of the New York stage, whose first screen role placed her in the leading feminine part of "Only Yesterday," Universal's John M. Stahl production in which she is featured with John Boles. This fascinating love drama based on Frederick Lewis Allen's best seller of the same name is now on the screen of the Grand theater, tracing an ill-fated love affair over a period of 12 years of America's most exciting history.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Right on the heels of her triumph in "Morning Glory" comes Katharine Hepburn, the hip! hip! hooray! star of RKO-Radio Pictures, for she's giving three cheers for Katharine all along the cheer section of motion pictures, in a role as made to order for her as Jo in "Little Women" now playing at the Cliftona, was made to order for the author, Louisa M. Alcott, and Jo was taken from Alcott's own life.

Jo, as millions of readers have known her down the years since 1868, when the volume was first published, is tall, thin and brown, restless, romping, ambitious, generous, lovable. She is a lopsided tomboy who finally grows up to find a crowning romance.

demonstrations at Memorial hall where, of course, admission is free to all women, who are invited as the guests of this newspaper.

The daily class sessions will include discussions of new food products which thereafter will be available through your own favorite grocers and markets. She will also discuss new wares for the dining room table, new ideas for serving, entertaining, planning menus and special occasions.

The lectures and discussions are only a small part of the comprehensive program planned for each day. Many dishes will be cooked right on the platform in the model kitchen set up for Mrs. Thurn. Recipes for many other new dishes will be given away free at each session, and other dishes will be described and their importance and place in the home menu discussed.

Mrs. Thurn in planning the cooking school with The Herald has urged that an invitation be extended broadly to every woman in this community. Her work in past years has shown her the importance of economical marketing and cookery, of careful planning and deliberate buying not only of foods but in home furnishings as well. These subjects as well as new ideas in entertaining will be important parts of the daily program.

FOLLOW WHITE HOUSE

"We could do no better than to pattern our behaviour after that of the first lady of the land—Mrs. Roosevelt," said Mrs. Thurn. "Simple meals, carefully planned and well cooked are the fare at the White House. Why not make them the rule in our own homes? Not only because such meals are more economical, easier to plan and cook and serve, but because simple cookery is the best for all of us; and incidentally smarter this year."

The Herald agrees with Mrs. Thurn that no sounder principles of homemaking can be followed than those which she will discuss and demonstrate next week in the big, free Cooking School. Watch for the daily announcements about the school, and plan now for plenty of free time next week, to attend every session, as our guests. It is free, no tickets, no charge of any kind at any session.

When no word came Sunday, alarm was felt. It was feared he might have been forced down while trying to fly over the north sea from the Dutch coast to Copenhagen. This would have been a short cut that might have enabled him to make a non-stop flight.

Coste became known as the "French Lindbergh" when he returned Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's visit to France, by flying from Paris to New York in September, 1930. Maurice Bellonte accompanied him on that flight. He entertained Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh during their visit to Paris last October.

Since his Paris-New York flight Coste has been devoting himself chiefly to his business interests, which have become extensive. His trip to Copenhagen is to discuss details of the proposed sale of airplane motors to the Dutch government.

Coste was the first aviator to fly the South Atlantic from shore to shore. He made this flight in 1927 with Lieut. Joseph Lebrun. In 1928 he flew with Lebrun from Paris to Tokyo in less than six days and in 1929, with Bellonte, he set a world's record for long-distance non-stop flying by a flight from Paris to Manchuria.

Mr. Roosevelt paid his respects to critics of the New Deal. These fall into two classes, he said, those who merely criticize without offering anything in an alternative way, and those who disagree with what is being done but suggest something constructive in its place. The former class he held to be "unpatriotic."

The immediate need, the president asserted, "is to get more people on payrolls at 'purchasing wages'."

permitted the vast sections of our population to exist in an un-American way, which permitted a maldistribution of wealth and of power.

CROWN POINT JAIL

Crown Point and Lake-co, Indiana, authorities had boasted of the "fool proof" qualities of their jail when Dillinger was locked up there a month ago, following his capture at Tucson, Ariz., on January 25, but despite all the precautions Dillinger kept his boast that he'd get out. Photo shows the county jail from which Dillinger fled Saturday.

N. AND W. TO EQUIP CARRIERS FOR AUTOS

To facilitate the loading and unloading of automobiles and as an added convenience for shippers and receivers of motor cars, the Norfolk and Western Railway today announced that it will equip 100 of its all-steel auto box cars with automobile loading and unloading devices.

The equipment, an innovation in its field, will be assembled as soon as possible and installed at the Roanoke shops.

The apparatus, the statement said, will greatly expedite the loading and unloading of automobiles and will permit the loading of four machines in a single box car instead of three, the usual number now loaded.

The device, which will be a permanent installation, consists of two platforms inside of the box car, one in each end of the car. The automobiles are placed on the platforms after being loaded into the box car through the side doors. They are then anchored to the platforms to prevent shifting.

The platforms are hoisted to bring the top to the machines as close to the roof of the box car as practicable. In the raised position the platforms are supported from the floor by means of struts. This arrangement allows other cars to be loaded on the floor and partially under the automobile anchored to the raised platforms. The cars resting on the floor are also anchored to prevent shifting in any direction.

WILL WAR COME?

Hungary's Minister, Lamenting Nation's Losses In Great War, Says No New War Near.

"NEW ORDER NEEDED"

Admiral Horthy Believes Europe Should Undergo Reorganization.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary, believed a year ago that war was certain to come. Now, he tells H. R. Knickerbocker in this article of the "New Order" he believes there will be no war at all.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
Copyrighted, 1934, By International News Service. Reproduction in whole or part forbidden.

BUDAPEST, March 5.—His serene highness, the regent of Hungary, Admiral Horthy De Nagybanya is not a king by title, but he is a monarch in fact and surroundings. The regent believes that Europe, like a vest that has been buttoned up wrongly, needs to be "unbuttoned and buttoned up right again."

His palace rises above the Danube, splendid, wide, high, big as a mountain. This has been the regent's seat for the last fourteen years. It will probably be his seat until he dies. While he is there the regency has all the authority of the crown, and considerably more authority. His serene highness is the undisputed lord of the land.

Sentries present arms at the barracks on the way to the palace. Sentries present arms at the gate. Sentries present arms at the palace entrance. A non-commissioned officer leads the way past other sentries to the door of the regent's apartments. Before the door stands a magnificent "puru" in scarlet and gold and helmet, pike and shield. A magyar body-guard.

FORM DEFENSE LINE
In the first anteroom an officer in naval uniform receives. The regent was an active admiral. In the second anteroom a group of officers in the violet jackets of the cavalry form the last line of defense.

The regent himself is more simply clad than any of his aides save the naval officer. The regent wears the plain blue uniform of an admiral. A single white decoration is on his jacket.

He is hearty, friendly, open, frank, hard. He put down the Reds with a hand so strong that the third international lists him communist enemy number one. He looks it. But he looks above all the naval officer. He has a no-nonsense and not a hint of his name, but his ruler still smacks of the sea. His cabinet is plain as a captain's cabin. He is not afraid to talk. He talks slow but good English. "To put it shortly," he fired back at an opening, "last year I was certain there would be war this year. Now I think there will be no war at all."

"The grave danger," he put out a red-brown fist, "was of the so-called preventive war. Of course it would have prevented nothing, and would only have brought about in the end the same disaster that would overtake Europe after any war whether you call it 'preventive' or not."

HISTORICAL IDEA

"This idea of 'preventive' war is one of the oldest in history." The admiral exploded. "From time immemorial whenever anybody wanted to make war he was always saying it was in order to preserve the peace. Napoleon ran around Europe fighting all day long, every day in the year, fighting everybody in sight and all the time he swore he was doing it to make peace." The admiral chuckled. "The Romans," he said, "they did it too. And of course they were right. They whipped everybody in sight and then they had peace for 300 years."

The regent looked up for a moment at the portrait of the Emperor Franz Joseph. He had been adjutant to the emperor for five years, and he called him "the best man I ever knew; the most perfect gentleman with more goodness of heart than any man I ever knew."

So the idea of preventive war is not new. Yet in the Europe of today a preventive war would be the most catastrophic mistake. It would be as disastrous for the people who started it as for the people against whom it was directed.

"But it seems now virtually certain that wiser councils have prevailed. After all, in order to carry out a war, it is necessary at any rate to believe, to have a certain conviction that you are going to win. Now who today could go to war against anybody else and say positively 'we will surely win'?"

2 JAILED FOR BURGLARIZING GRANT OFFICE

Leo Alexander, 20, of Lancaster, Confesses, Implicates Curtis Walton

QUESTION LATTER

Wire to Newark Results in Alexander Arrest

Armed with a signed confession by one Lancaster man, local authorities were questioning a second, Monday, prior to filing charges in connection with the robbery of the S. C. Grant coal office. Mr. Grant's safe was wrecked, and money and a diamond ring stolen. A typewriter was also taken from the office in the robbery on Friday, Feb. 23.

Leo Alexander, 20, of 508 Pierce-st., dictated a confession Sunday evening while questioned by Prosecutor Ray W. Davis in the presence of Mayor W. B. Cady, Sheriff Charles Radcliff, Officer William McCrady, Deputy Bob Armstrong, and Court Stenographer Helen Rowe.

The confession named Curtis Walton, 24, of 112 1/2 W. Main-st., Lancaster as the actual "safe-cracker." Walton has been held in the county jail since last Wednesday when he was arrested for investigation by Officer McCrady in Lancaster. Glenn Carpenter, Lancaster Rl. 3, arrested with Walton, was released when he was cleared of any guilt. He had brought Walton and Alexander to Circleville the evening of the robbery but left when they went to commit the robbery, police have learned.

HELD AS SUSPECT

Police had thought Walton was connected with the robbery but did not have a strong case against him until Alexander was arrested in Newark Saturday evening. Named as a suspect, it was learned in Lancaster that he had a sister in Newark. A letter was written to Newark police but that obtained no action. A wire sent to the Licking-co sheriff by Mayor Cady at the instigation of Sheriff Radcliff resulted in the youth being arrested. Cady, Radcliff and McCrady went to Newark Saturday night despite the dense fog and returned Alexander to the local jail.

Questioned through part of Sunday he refused to make any statements until he finally "broke." Alexander denied receiving any of the money, or seeing the ring. He saw Walton carrying what he identified as the typewriter. Alexander said he waited outside the Grant office while Walton did the "cracking."

CLEAR OTHER JOBS

Not only was the Grant robbery cleared by Alexander's confession but so was the theft of Gail Wilson's and Marshall Cates' automobile, admitted. The Wilson

DR. WYNEKOOP HURT IN FALL

Strikes Head; Able to Enter Court, However.

CHICAGO, March 5.—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop suffered an attack of nausea today and in attempting to reach the bathroom from her room in the county jail, collapsed and fell to the floor. She struck her head and severely bruised the left side of her face. She was sufficiently revived to attend court, however.

CHICAGO, March 5.—The trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop for the weird operating table murder of her comely daughter-in-law, Rheta, entered its final phase today in the criminal court of Judge Harry B. Miller.

As defense lawyers prepared to rest their case shortly after the session opened Prosecutor Charles Dougherty had five rebuttal witnesses ready to testify. Each, according to the prosecutor, will attack the denial made by the aged and sickly woman physician when she testified in her own defense last week.

PIERPONT TO GO ON TRIAL

Dillinger's 'Trigger-Man' Begins Fight for Life Tuesday; Argue Over Judge.

LIMA, March 5.—With the menacing shadow of John Dillinger, America's "Public Enemy No. 1," lurking at-large in the background, officials here cautiously but determinedly moved forward today to bring the first of his three bandit gang members to trial for the murder of Sheriff Jess L. Barber.

Arguments on an affidavit of prejudice filed against Common Pleas Judge E. E. Everett by attorneys for Harry Pierpont, the accused "trigger man" and the first scheduled to go to trial for the Sheriff's murder last October when Dillinger was liberated from the Allen-co jail, was scheduled to be heard today by Carl V. Weygant, chief justice of the Ohio Supreme court.

Pierpont's trial is slated for tomorrow and unless some obstacle, legal or otherwise, is thrown in the way, it will be started according to schedule in a courtroom guarded to the eaves with alert, heavily-armed sentries, and with machine guns, hidden in secreted nests outside, trained on every door and window.

Via the "grapevine," news of Dillinger's sensational escape from Crown Point, Ind., jail Saturday filtered through the sandbag barricades around the jail over the week-end into the closely guarded and separated cells of Pierpont and the other two Dillinger henchmen, Charles Makley and Russell Clark.

2 EXECUTED FOR KILLING OFFICER

ROCKVIEW PENITENTIARY, BELLEFONTE, Pa., March 5.—In hushed silence, broken only by prayers recited by a priest, two slayers of a Scranton policeman walked to their deaths in the state's electric chair here today. Displaying no signs of emotion, Wallace Skawinski, Scranton, walked to the chair at 7:01 a. m. he was pronounced dead at 7:05. James J. Riggs, Colchester, Conn., his convicted partner in the slaying of Patrolman Lewis Roberts broke down under the strain.

With wavering steps, Riggs was assisted to the "death seat" at 7:07 and pronounced dead at 7:12.

Sheriff Crushed

Mrs. Holley Defiant at Criticism; Believes Sheriff's Job for Man

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 5.—The most talked about woman in the state of Indiana, Sheriff Lillian Holley, was today alternately crushed by the inexplicable escape of desperado John Dillinger and defiant because of the criticism being heaped upon her.

Looking very fatigued after two sleepless nights, Mrs. Holley was on the job directing the widespread search for the gangster who escaped from her custody Saturday. She conferred with all who had business with her, including Attorney General Philip Lutz, Jr., who came here to make a special report for Gov. Paul V. McNutt.

Mrs. Holley today was not altogether sure that a sheriff's job is one for a woman.

"I realize now this job is a man's job," she said, her voice breaking. "But just the same I am going to stick out the rest of my term which ends January 1. Then I don't know what I'll do. I'll probably retire to the farm my husband left me."

"I wanted to make good for his sake. After all, it was his job I was carrying on. I was really getting a big kick out of the responsibility of being the state's only woman sheriff, but—I guess I'm through now."

"They are criticizing me because I am a woman," said the

OHIO RIVER FLOOD FEARS ALLEVIATED

By International News Service.
Fears of a flood in the Ohio river region were dispelled today as reports from "flood menace" cities along the river indicated that the river, although expected to rise, would not reach the flood-stage.

Spring-like weather and rains had threatened the district over the week-end when snow and ice that had choked feeder rivers and streams was released.

Reports from Portsmouth stated that highway 75 between Portsmouth and Cincinnati was flooded yesterday but that traffic had been resumed on the highway today.

The Ohio river is rising steadily at Gallipolis, it was said, but a crest of 35 feet—below flood level—is all that is expected.

3 THEFTS HERE

Several breaking and entering jobs confronted police today after thieves had an active week-end.

The largest loss was found at the garage of William Baughman, W. Main-st., where drills, plugs, and a large number of tools were stolen. No estimate has yet been placed on the theft although it is expected to be high.

The E. E. Clifton garage was entered and a suede jacket, pair of black mittens, and a pair of gloves stolen.

The Given Oil Co. reported theft of $10 from its cash register. Entrance was gained through a rear door.

HOSPITAL NEWS

Donald Woodard, three-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Woodard, W. Mill-st. underwent an operation for hernia at Berger hospital, Monday.

Joan Mowery, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mowery, R. F. D. 4, underwent an emergency appendectomy, Saturday, at Berger hospital.

22 FILE CLAIMS

Twenty-two Pickaway-co workers filed claims for injury with the Ohio industrial commission during February.

None of the accidents were fatal and none caused permanent disability while only time caused over seven days' lost time.

BIRTHS

Killer Believed Hiding in Pre-Arranged Hideout in Chicago Area

McNUTT'S MAN ACTS

Believe Trusty-Guard Had Hand in Daring Escape

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 5.—A manhunt spreading over four states failed today to disclose even a hint that might guide officers to the hiding place of John Dillinger, desperado extraordinary who bluffed his way out of the fortress-like county jail with a crude wooden pistol.

Police of Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Missouri were searching for "America's most desperate outlaw," but he had vanished with the same precision and efficiency that marked his sensational escape from the jail here.

Sheriff Lillian Holley, whose ward he was, and other officers directing the search were convinced that Dillinger had found sanctuary in a pre-arranged hideout within a 75 mile radius of Chicago.

AIDED BY GUARD

Out of a maze of conflicting disclosures made by public officials here relative to the ease with which Dillinger made his escape it was revealed that the desperado's flight was made possible by the aid, either willing or unwilling, of a jail guard.

A three-way investigation of Dillinger's departure disclosed that Sam Cahoon, first of the many guards made captive by the diligent bank robber and killer, is a known casual with a police record for habitual drunkenness spreading over a 14 year period.

At the time of Saturday's jail break, Cahoon, although classed as a guard and deputy sheriff, was in fact a trusty and not a recognized peace officer and was an inmate of the jail serving out his time as a handymen.

Only five of the 18 guards assigned to the task of guarding Dillinger until his murder trial March 12 were de jure deputy sheriffs. Cahoon, 64 years old, was classed as one of these five.

State and county authorities were pressing the multiple investigation with Attorney General Philip Lutz, Jr., representing Gov. Paul McNutt.

Sheriff Holley, the only woman sheriff in Indiana, was conducting an independent investigation of her own while directing one phase of the manhunt for the desperado whom she says she would "like to shoot down on sight."

ASK RESIGNATION

The board of county commissioners which designated Mrs. Holley the successor to her husband's office as sheriff, when he was slain a year ago announced it will demand that she resign her office today pending completion of the investigation.

From Louis Baker, jail warden in command of the jail when Dillinger locked up his many guards and escaped, came the charge that a guard aided the super-desperado in his get-away.

"Only a guard would be in a position to know the exact location of the hideout," he said.

WEATHER CHANGES

What a lot can happen in seven days!

Only one short week ago Circleville was blasted under eight inches of snow and suffering one of the most severe cold spells of winter. But today, one is not surprised to get news of the perennial "first robin."

Although Spring is not officially due until March 21, spring-like temperatures were reported from throughout the state yesterday. In Circleville, for instance, mercury shed its overcoat and took a trip to the 57 degree mark as compared with zero and sub-zero readings a week ago.

The premature spring may be short-lived, however. Weather forecasters predicted slightly colder weather.

George W. Krauf, aged 64, was found dead in bed at the home of his sister, Mrs. Grover Boyer, Stoutsville, Monday at 7 a. m. He had been ill five months.

Mrs. Boyer is his only survivor. Funeral services will be Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Boyer residence with Rev. Chas. Hoffmann officiating. Burial in Maple Hill cemetery is in charge of Critzer and Van Cleave.

MOSCOW, March 5.—Ten women and two children of the 101 persons stranded when the Soviet ice-breaker Chelyuskin sank in the Arctic Ocean near Bering Straits Feb. 13, were rescued today by the Russian plane Ant-1 after a hundred mile flight from Wallen bay. It was officially announced.

Sawyer Avows Candidacy For Governor's Position

CINCINNATI, March 5.—In one of the shortest opening campaign statements ever issued by an Ohio candidate, Charles Sawyer, Lieutenant governor, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Sawyer's statement released from his office here said simply:

"I am a candidate for Governor." Sawyer was selected in 1932 by the state committee to run for Lieutenant governor when William G. Pickrel, the nominee, withdrew from the race. Although he had less than three months within which to campaign, he started political observers when in the November election he polled a greater majority than President Roosevelt, receiving the highest vote ever cast and the greatest majority ever given to a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor. Most previous Democratic nominees for Ohio's lieutenant governorship either had been defeated or elected by the narrowest margin.

HAS BUSY CAREER

Sawyer's decision opens another chapter in a busy and versatile life which has included school teaching, practice of the law, two years in the World War, including eight months of service overseas, two terms as a member of the City Council of Cincinnati, the

PRINCESS RECEIVES $126,000 VERDICT

Charge of Libel Against Film Company Followed Filming of Rasputin Picture.

LONDON, March 5.—Princess Irina, Youssouff-twp, today was awarded a verdict of 25,000 pounds (about $126,000) in her suit against the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film company whose movie, "Rasputin, The Mad Monk," she charged had libelled her.

The jury deliberated for less than two hours.

The princess had asked damages of approximately $2,000,000, alleging that the character "Princess Natasha" in the film was intended to represent her and led the world to believe that she had actually been seduced by Rasputin, whereas she did not know him.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's defense was that Natasha was an entirely fictional character.

This was stressed in a closing statement to the jury delivered today by Sir William Jowett, former attorney general, and chief of defense counsel.

The trial brought out a dramatic recital by Princess Youssouff-twp, in phew of the murdered czar Nicholas, of his part in the actual slaying of the monk, Gregory Rasputin.

WOODIN IMPROVED

NEW YORK, March 5.—William H. Woodin, first secretary of the treasury in the Roosevelt cabinet, was back at his home here today after a sojourn in a Tucson, Ariz., sanatorium, where he underwent treatment for a throat ailment.

Woodin declared his health was greatly improved, but that his voice was not yet sufficiently strong to carry on long conversations.

"NEW DEAL" TO REMAIN SAYS F.O.R.

"Recovery Agencies to Become Permanent Parts of Government"

IN NATIONAL TALK

Says Can Be No Return to "Old Conditions"

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The New Deal, as embodied in the NRA and sundry other recovery agencies, is here to stay, President Roosevelt informed the country today.

He addressed several thousand industrialists gathered here in a national conference to readjust codes, but through a national radio hook-up his audience was country-wide.

There can be no return, he said, to old conditions under which the economic interests of the country pursued a dog-eat-dog policy "and the devil take the hindmost."

Future steps toward economic recovery, he declared, call for shorter hours for labor, increased wages, stricter compliance with the codes of fair competition, increased protection for the consumer, greater self-regulation of business, and a more equitable distribution of wealth and of power.

AMUSED AT 'FASCISM'

The president said he was "amused and a little saddened" over the assertions of those who proclaim that we are headed toward "either Fascism or dictatorship."

"The real truth of the matter is," he said, "that for a number of years in our country the machinery of democracy had failed in function."

"Through inertia on the part of leaders and on the part of the people themselves the operations of government had fallen into the hands of special groups of whom vociferously led by people who undertook to obtain special advantages for special classes and others led by a handful of individuals who believed in their super-human ability to retain in their own hands the entire business and financial control over the economic and social structure of the nation."

Mr. Roosevelt accompanied his exposition of the New Deal with a ringing call for cooperation.

MOVING AHEAD

The country, he said, is moving steadily ahead to better times, and what is now necessary is whole-hearted, unselfish teamwork. He called upon the business leaders to supply that.

"One year ago," he said, "drawing the parallel, 'we were suffering and shrinking under economic pressures so intolerable that collapse was at hand. We had arrived at the day to make our choice. The American people responded to the call for action with eager enlistment—enlistment in the struggle against ruthless self-seeking, reckless greed and economic anarchy. We undertook by lawful, constitutional processes to organize a disintegrating system of production and exchange."

"The methods and details of that reorganization may and will change from year to year, but it is very certain that the American people understand that the purpose of the reorganization was not only to bring back prosperity."

"It was far deeper than that. The reorganization must be permanent for all the rest of our lives in that never again will we permit social conditions which

WARN THIEVES OF STOLEN BOTTLES

NEW YORK, March 10.—The police radio system today was broadcasting at intervals one of the strangest alarms in the city's history.

The warning said: "Will the thieves who stole the bottles from a parked automobile near 49th-st. and 10th-ave. refrain from drinking out of them in part of their lives. These bottles contain a fluid that looks and tastes like wine. The fluid is harmless when taken in minute and mechanical quantities, but is deadly when drunk as a beverage."

The bottles were taken from the automobile of a salesman for a pharmaceutical company.

Tigers Defeated In 'Consolation'; Darby is Ousted

Playing without the guidance of their coach, Circleville high school Tigers forced Bexley into an overtime period before losing, 22-21, in the consolation round of the district class A court tournament.

Coach Pete Herberholz was called to Cincinnati by the illness of his mother.

The last time the two teams met on the C. A. C. court the Bexleyites were victorious in two overtime periods.

Darby-two, sole Pickaway-co survivor of the first round in the district class B tournament, was eliminated by Bremen, 54-13, in the second round. Bremen is the Fairfield-co champion defeating the undefeated Stoutsville team to get into the tournament title.

The Tigers were eliminated from the tournament, Friday, losing to Columbus East by a 33-12 score.

GAME HARD FOUGHT

They fought the Bexley team tooth-and-nail before admitting defeat. It was quite a battle and at numerous times brought the crowd to its feet.

The defeat was a story of missed foul shots since the Tigers made but seven out of 15 while Bexley made six out of ten.

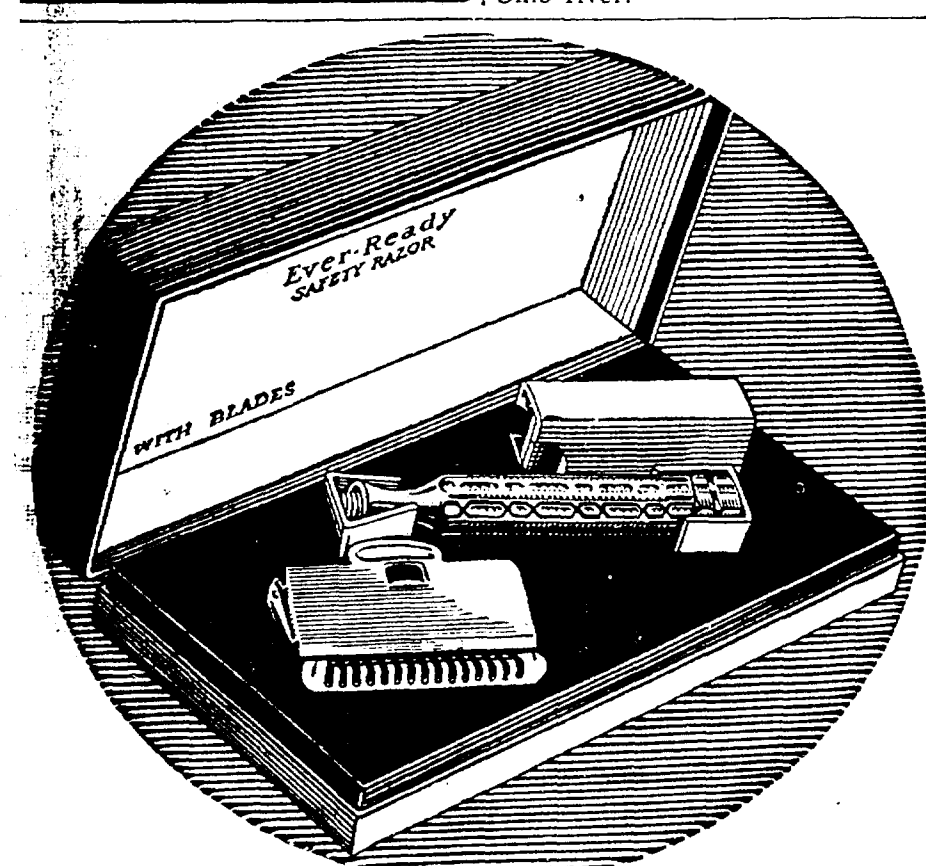

Darby-two never had a chance against the hard-driving Bremen.

About This And That

BY THE
SECOND GUESSER

THAT it doesn't take long to cut down the list of entries in a basketball tournament is seen by the fact that the 150 teams remain in the group of 1,150 which started on journeys toward possible championships less than two weeks ago.

Of the eight class A teams that met in the state tournament last year only two have been eliminated, Toledo Scott and Bellevue. Dover, the defending champion, survived the district tournament at New Concord last week and goes to Dennison this weekend to compete with Steubenville, East Liverpool, New Philadelphia and four other schools for the sectional title and the right to enter the state contest.

Some other teams remaining in the class "A," running are Marietta, undefeated this year, Lima Central, Columbus East and North, Lancaster, Newark, Dayton Fairmount, Springfield, favored to win last year but beaten in the first game by the champions; Bowling Green, Napoleon, Akron West, Cambridge, and Findlay.

By districts, four are still in the central, eight each in the eastern, northeastern, southwestern and northwestern, and 15 in the southeastern where no sectional tournament was held. This district includes Athens, Washington, C. H. Greenfield, Pomeroy, Chillicothe and a number of other schools.

Purdue, champion of the Big Ten, seeks a new scoring record tonight against Illinois. The Boilermakers have scored 486 points, a new record in itself over the 447 mark owned by Indiana, but they hope to establish a figure that will stand the onslaughts of Big Ten teams for years to come. The Big Ten closes its campaign tonight.

youngest member ever to sit in that body.

In addition to his state office, Sawyer is President of the school board in the little village of Glendale, where he lives. His interest in and understanding of school matters may be explained by the fact that both his father and mother were teachers, his father recently retiring after fifty-one years of service in the public schools of Hamilton.

Following his education in the schools of Wyoming and Madisonville, Sawyer entered Oberlin college, where, despite the fact he helped to work his way through college, he completed the usual four year course in three years. Leaving college, he entered the Cincinnati Law School. Here, while studying law in the daytime, he taught high school pupils at night.

At the close of his law study he took first place in the bar examination at Columbus. At the present time Sawyer is a member of the firm of Dinsmore, Shohl, Sawyer, and Dinsmore, one of the leading law firms of Cincinnati. He has had a varied and extensive practice in both office and trial work.

JOINED INFANTRY

When the United States entered the World War, Sawyer immediately entered the service, and although offered a commission in the Judge Advocate's department, declined to accept it, preferring instead to remain in the infantry branch of the service. Before the Armistice he was commissioned a Major. He is a member of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Lieutenant Governor Sawyer is interested in farm problems and owns a farm himself, where he spends considerable time.

He is married, and with Mrs. Sawyer and five children lives in the Village of Glendale. Always interested in out of door life and athletic competition, Sawyer has recently renewed his interest in sport by participating in the reorganization of the Cincinnati Reds of the National Baseball league, of which club he is now a director and the legal adviser. In high school and college his primary physical activity was boxing.

Other candidates for the Democratic nomination are William G. Pickrel and Martin L. Davey.

tion of doors, rooms, keys and armaments," said Baker when asked where Dillinger obtained his minute knowledge of the jail premises.

Dillinger and his companion in the jailbreak, Herbert Youngblood, a negro accused of murder, were last sighted near Peotone, Ill., about two hours after they escaped. Since then authorities have received no authentic word as to their whereabouts.

Because the pair were riding in an official automobile belonging to Sheriff Holley authorities were convinced that Dillinger and his negro companion had flown to a pre-designated hideout. The speedy sedan, besides its official insignia, was equipped with red and green headlights that might lead to speedy identification if the car remained on the highways.

The toy gun which Dillinger used to cow his guards and lock them in the bull pen was whittled by the gangster from the wooden top of a washboard, Prosecutor Estill said.

"We found shavings on the floor of the Dillinger cell, the result of his whittling," Estill said. "The board was found under his straw mattress. He must have had the board in his cell more than a day to accomplish such expert results in woodwork."

Deputy Baker maintained that the cells of Dillinger and 14 other prisoners were searched carefully the day before the break, "but no sign of weapons were found, real or faked."

Baker admitted that the desperado had razors in his cell with which to carry on his wood carving. This, he said, was because there is no barber in the jail.

With the aid of the silver-hued safety razor handle Dillinger was able to make his wooden pistol look more realistic.

As the various investigations progressed Cahoon continued to hold the spotlight. It was Cahoon who opened the way for Dillinger's break for freedom when he failed to lock up the 15 prisoners, including Dillinger, in the bull pen before making his own entrance with an armful of soap for the inmates.

Prosecutor Estill was questioning the first of 43 persons today, including jail guards, prisoners and visitors to Dillinger's cell during his short incarceration here.

dispirited Mrs. Holley. "A man could have done no more. I have been on the job 20 hours a day every day since Dillinger came here. Twelve extra guards were added to the regular force and every possible precaution was taken to prevent escape."

CITE'S SYMPATHY
"I can't explain it, no one can explain it. One thing is certain—public sympathy he received when he was brought here did a lot to bolster up his nerve. He had fan mail sent to him, and of course we never gave it to him."

If there had only been some shooting, something to have given me a justifiable opportunity to fight, then this thing wouldn't be so hard to take," she lamented. "What else could we do, to hold him here? The only thing we hadn't done was to handcuff him to the cell bars day and night, and one cannot do that in the twentieth century. But don't be misled; I could kill him on sight without a moment's hesitation or compunction."

A Momentous 'First Year'

AMERICA looks back upon one completed year of Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration as president, but it leaves to posterity to pass judgement upon this historic and heroic twelvemonth. It is too soon to appraise it at its real worth.

Never did an American president enter office under such handicaps as awaited Mr. Roosevelt last March 4. The banks were closed, industry was virtually at a standstill. The morale of the people was at its lowest ebb since the dark days of the Revolution. And the machinery of government had completely broken down.

Before the sun set on his inauguration day the nation knew a real helmsman had taken the wheel. And when congress convened in special session a few days later it found out what real leadership is like.

Prosperity hasn't returned but the way for its return has been paved, and largely by the initiative and courage of President Roosevelt. He dared to do, and the people took new courage and new hope.

The bank holiday, which restored financial stability; the legalization of beer, which gave business its first impulse; the Citizens Conservation Corps, which rehabilitated 300,000 young men and restored the faith of their families and themselves in humanity and government; the Home Owners Loan Corporation, which has saved the homes of countless depression victims; the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, which salvaged the farms; the Civil World Administration, which brought the jobless millions through the winter secure from hunger and exposure; the Public World Administration which is to take up the slack in employment from this point on; the National Recovery Act, which injected new life in industry and brought an end to the sweatshop era; all these and many others are the works of the man who now sits in the white house ministering to the wants of a people that but 12 short months ago hopelessly scanned the future.

This was the work of a man of vision and heroic strength, who will be honored and admired for it even though complete national recovery does not come in his time. One year in the white house has proved Franklin D. Roosevelt to be that man of the hour who has always come to the American people in their desperation and misery.

The life a young man should live depends on whether your own kids are boys or girls.

Impractical Economists

RECENTLY, many readers were impressed by a series of articles leading to the conclusion that the problems of industry could be solved only by the consumer's decision to save less and spend more. The articles admitted the theoretical propriety of reduced spending and increased saving when aggregate consumer demand should have outrun production facilities. The gist of the series was that the present industrial dilemma is a producing capacity in excess of visible consumption.

To disinterested persons, the reasoning seems entirely academic. Their natural comment was that the average citizen spends or saves, and presumably will continue to do so, according to his personal character or circumstances. Therefore, while the argument that he ought to adjust his use of surplus income to preserving equilibrium in trade might be unanswerable economically, practically it would get exactly nowhere.

If permanent prosperity and absolute abolition of unemployment depend upon establishing and enforcing an exact ratio between saving and spending, society must continue to get along with alternating periods of prosperity and hard times.

President Mendota of Cuba has issued a decree dissolving the old army and providing for establishment of a "constitutional army." But constitutional armies in Cuba don't always stay that way.

A farm war would be just the thing in case of a tomato surplus.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By JOAN CLAYTON

COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Fear that Bill McGee, the racketeer, would wreak vengeance on her and her family if she refused to go out with him, caused lovely Patricia Warren to accept his invitations. Bill is shot by a rival gangster while in Pat's company. Pat rushes home in terror and her stepmother puts her out, saying the police are looking for Pat. Unable to find employment, Pat resorts to her card skill and plays professional bridge. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, makes her his partner. While they are discussing business details at his home, Clark Tracy, the polo player and Pat's secret love, calls. She had met him once but he does not recognize her. Haverholt introduces Pat as his niece. She is indignant, but he explains later that he was thinking of her reputation and that it would be advisable for her to assume that role as long as she is to stay at his home. Pat visits her old home and finds that Bill McGee has wrecked her stepmother's dressmaking shop because Pat fled from him the night of the shooting. She returns to Haverholt who promises to protect her. Accustomed to poverty, Pat revels in the luxury of her surroundings. Reading an announcement of Clark's approaching marriage to Marthe March, Pat experiences pangs of jealousy. While playing bridge with two young men, Haverholt embarrasses Pat by ridiculing her game. When she retaliates by criticizing his bidding, he is furious. Pat rushes to her room in tears. Haverholt comes to her and, try as she might, Pat can't be angry with him.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Like one hypnotized Patricia heard herself agree to go downstairs, to resume the play. She said none of the things she had planned to say; she had gained none of the promises she had planned to gain. Her rebellion had died aborning. Nor had Haverholt finished.

Clasping his hands about his knees, bending his gray eyes upon her, he said gravely:

"Every bridge team that is successful, Patricia, had a follower and a leader, a follower who is steady and conservative, a leader who provides the thrills, the psychics and the fireworks, a leader who decides the campaign, a follower who accepts his dicta unquestioningly, a leader who may be wildly unconventional, a follower who is rigidly conventional, always. We bridge players call them pitcher and catcher. Which player are you going to be, Patricia, in our team—pitcher or catcher?"

"I guess," said the girl in a small voice, "I guess I'll be the catcher."

"Right," said the man contentedly, "you are."

Her surrender was complete. She understood that, and, strangely, found no humiliation in the thought. Suddenly, strangely, Patricia knew that arrogant, insolent, egotistical as he was, she would not change Julian Haverholt. In some dim way she realized that it was better that she should be defeated always than that he should be defeated once. He would not yield in anything; he could not. He would die before he gave ground.

"Let's shake hands on it, Patricia."

Gravely she gave him her hand. "We should mark this day somehow," said Haverholt, smiling at his own drama, "this day when we reached understanding. I'd like to give you something. What will you have, Patricia? A string of pearls, a diamond ring, what will you have?"

"I don't want anything," she protested, embarrassed.

"You must have something. Young girls always cherish a pet desire, don't they?"

"Very well, then," said Patricia abruptly, "I'd like a Madison roadster with wire wheels."

"Julian is crazy about you, too," Clark pursued with the kindest of impulses.

Haverholt looked at her meditatively. "You shall have one tomorrow," he promised. "But I'd certainly like to know how your pet desire happened to take such a sudden and definite form."

Patricia did not tell him. The next afternoon promptly at three o'clock Patricia appeared at the Madison Automobile showrooms. Julian Haverholt had promised to meet her there. At fourteen minutes after three he had not yet arrived. Recalling his oft-repeated statement that he never waited for anyone, that people always waited for him, Patricia smiled rather grimly.

Suddenly through the plate glass windows she spied Julian Haverholt alighting from a taxi. Another man followed him to the sidewalk. They stood talking a minute, arguing, it seemed. Patricia's heart began to beat hard and fast. The second man was Clark Tracy. The two came in together. Patricia was smiling, outwardly composed, when they approached her. She extended a slim, cool hand in greeting.

"I didn't expect to see you, Mr. Tracy."

Her tone was dignified and gracious, but her color was a little high.

"I didn't expect to be here; only I ran into Julian and he was good enough to let me come along."

"I suppose you've picked out half a dozen cars by now," commented Haverholt amiably, enjoying her flushed cheeks and starry eyes.

"This is no place to keep a young woman waiting. I should have known better."

"No, you're wrong," Patricia told him seriously. "From the very first I've settled on the yellow roadster, the one over there." She pointed. The roadster was sleek and low and flashing in the sunshine. Patricia drew a long breath. "Isn't it perfectly stunning?" she demanded.

Her voice was full of youth and rapture. The men's eyes met over her head. They smiled together.

"I should guess that you were a little excited," suggested Clark slowly, appreciatively, looking down at her. In a kind of sudden surprise, it struck him that Haverholt's niece was an exceptionally beautiful girl. That blazing hair was perfect with her clear, petal-like skin. She was natural and unaffected, too; a charming child, all in all.

"Pink Eye" a Contagious Disease

While Not a Serious Affliction It Is a Rapid Spreader

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

"PINK EYE," or acute conjunctivitis as it is known medically, is a common and highly contagious disease. It is an inflammation of the eye caused by a particular kind of infection.

In the beginning the eye becomes greatly congested. That is the reason the affliction is commonly called "pink eye."

At first the eyes itch, and almost immediately they get red. These symptoms are followed by a discharge of mucus. Smarting, burning and pain may be experienced on exposure to bright lights. Fortunately, the sight is rarely affected. Ordinarily the infection runs its course within three to seven days. The catarrhal discharge may persist and the eyes remain red and itchy for several weeks.

Simple Treatment

I am glad to say that the disease, bad as the eye looks, is not a serious one and requires little treatment. A good plan is to wash the eyes with a 3 per cent solution of boric acid or a very much weaker solution of zinc chloride. Use an eye cup frequently and keep the eyelids free from the crusty deposits that may form.

The visible symptoms of pink eye resemble another contagious disease of the eye. This is trachoma, a much more serious infection of the eye. In the latter disease the redness of the eyes is followed by a roughness of the inner parts of the lids. When trachoma is neglected, scars form. These scars deform the eyelids, sometimes causing the eyelashes to turn in and scratch the eye ball.

It is a painful affliction and if untreated, may lead to permanent blindness. Fortunately, the disease is not a common one. Indeed, in recent years very few cases are met outside of a few localities.

The Family Towel

Trachoma, like pink eye, is extremely contagious. It is easily transmitted from one person to another. It may run through families and schools. The infection is spread by the common use of towels, wash cloths, improperly sterilized swimming pools, or by rubbing the eyes with dirty fingers.

The family towel is an abomination and should never be used. Every individual should have his own towel. This should be the rule in the home, office or school. Instruct your children never to rub their eyes with dirty fingers. If it is necessary to wipe the eyes, it should be with one's own clean handkerchief.

Bear in mind, there are diseases of the eye which, if neglected, produce blindness. Do not overlook the fact that the longer you neglect any ailment of the eye, the longer it takes to cure it. Your eyes are most precious. Never neglect them.

Our troop rejoices in the fact that little Lorraine Lea, daughter of Mrs. Kenneth Lea who has been acting as our lieutenant this year, is showing signs of recovery from her very serious illness.

We also offer our sympathy to

Magazines Join Cannery in Fight Against Grading Canned Goods

WASHINGTON — The Big canning companies are bringing tremendous pressure against the Brain Trust proposal that they be required to conform to "grades and standards."

This is a system where each can of meat, vegetables or any other food would carry a stamp on the outside specifying that it was "US Grade No. 1" or "No. 2," or lower.

Thus the housewife could determine the quality of the goods she bought.

Pressure against this is coming not merely from the canners but from publishers of magazines of national circulation and other users of national advertising.

At the N.E.A. hearings on the canning code, it was disclosed that when the canners borrowed money from the banks, they were required by the bankers to specify the goods and standards of the products which they put up as collateral.

Also Swift, with Libby, McNeil and Libby, which operate subsidiaries in Canada, conform to much more rigorous Canadian laws regarding standards than those proposed by the N.R.A.

In other words, the canners were willing to do for the banks and for the Canadian public what they were not willing to do for the American public.

Numbers Racket

MacDuffie, the negro valet of the President, is a great fan for the Forbidden Numbers game, a mild form of underworld racket.

One day there was placed on the President's desk a letter out of which fell three or four policy slips, used in the numbers game.

The President called MacDuffie and addressed him with gravity.

"Now MacDuffie, when I was Governor of the State of New York I started a campaign on this sort of racket. Don't you know it is crooked? Don't you know you haven't a chance in the world of making your money on it?"

MacDuffie said nothing and walked away.

That night MacDuffie went solemnly into the private office of Colonel Louie Howe.

"Well, what's the matter MacDuffie?" inquired Howe.

Said MacDuffie with injured air:

"Please Cuh'nel, I wish you would ask the President not to open my mail any more."

Salute Echo

In a few months General Douglas MacArthur, demoted Chief of Staff, will retire from that office. His four years of duty are up, he will resume a lower rank, drop down to another command in the Army.

At present, when MacArthur visits his army or naval post, or any island possession of the United States, he is entitled to a nineteen gun salute — three guns less than the President and the same number of guns as the Secretary of State.

When he comes to be Chief of Staff, this salute — except at military posts — will no longer be accorded.

But the other day MacArthur proposed to some of his Congressional friends a new law requiring the nineteen gun salute for former chiefs of staff.

Will War Come?

sible military leader in Europe today would take.

"No, I now think not only that there will be no war, but that questions which now disturb the peace of Europe will ultimately be settled without any war at all. There is not one point of friction that could not be removed if the proper pressure were brought to bear by the great powers."

In interpretation it may be remarked that Hungary's chief aim today is to recover from the little Entente the enormous blocks of territory she lost, but particularly to recover Slovakia from Czechoslovakia.

If the great powers were to bring "the proper pressure" to bear on Czechoslovakia, Hungary feels her claim might be satisfied without war.

"What we need in Europe," thought went on the recent "New York Times," "is absolutely essential to the preservation of peace, because when moments of strain come, and great decisions have to be made you need your power concentrated."

I agree with Mussolini that fundamental changes in the organization of Europe are essential — for the preservation of the peace.

NEED DICTATORSHIP

The reorganization must be along lines that will permit the great powers to get together and say to any trouble-maker: "You must behave; you must cease to act as a loose cannon. That is not necessary. It would suffice if the great powers merely used their own forces as a threat. With such authority behind anybody I am confident that order would be restored in Europe in one day."

"But the reorganization must be thorough, and the injustices must be corrected. I cite the case of my own country. The situation in which we are today is absolutely intolerable. No civilized people could expect that we should tolerate it, and I am happy to note that the appreciation for Hungary's position is growing in England and in other countries. They recognize not only the material injustice done to us but above all the moral humiliation which is the hardest to bear."

The admiral became vehement. "We had everything, — we had coal and iron and gold and salt and oil. Now what have we got? They took away from us seventy-two per cent of our land and sixty per cent of our population. They left us nothing but wheat and soldiers. Good wheat, and good soldiers, but no value nowadays."

"And what makes it particularly hard to bear is the fact that Hungarians of all people are not accustomed to this sort of treatment. You as an American who comes from the south remember what the feelings of your people were when after the civil war negro governors were put in power in the southern states."

"HARD TO BEAR"

"After all we Hungarians have been an organized people with a unique culture for a thousand years, and for a gentleman whose forefathers have been gentlemen for a thousand years, to be kicked out of his castle, robbed of his land, thrown on the streets, and condemned to beggary, — that is very hard to bear."

"I understand the feelings of our people. We have had to use our authority for the last fourteen years to calm the natural emotions of a people that suffers so keenly under the intolerable injustices to which they have been subjected. I had to because I know the realities of the situation, and I know there is no use in running your head against a brick wall."

"But the patience of the people will certainly one day be rewarded, for I am convinced that revision will come by peaceful means."

WHAT OF GERMANY

"You ask what will happen when Germany is rearm. It is not necessary that anything should happen. Sooner or later the justifiable claims for revision will be granted, and there is no reason why there should be any war at all."

"But," he rose and straightened his jacket. "First must come reorganization and revision." Pointing at his buttons, "when your vest is not buttoned correctly, you must first unbutton it all the way down in order to button it up again. Europe must be unbuttoned and then buttoned up correctly again, and then we will have that peace for which all of us in Hungary are working."

The Danube flowed away down below the palace. Its gray surface mirrored a flood of sunshine. For a thousand years it has flowed through the land of the Hungarians, a proud people. It will flow another thousand years before Hungary surrenders her claims.

Tomorrow—Premier Gamboos of Hungary tells Knickerbocker another war will destroy civilization of Europe.

demonstrations at Memorial hall where, of course, admission is free to all women, who are invited as the guests of this newspaper.

The daily class sessions will include discussions of new food products which thereafter will be available through your own favorite grocers and markets. She will discuss new wares for the dining room table, new ideas for serving, entertaining, planning menus and special occasions.

The lectures and discussions are only a small part of the comprehensive program planned for each day. Many dishes will be cooked right on the platform in the model kitchen set up for Mrs. Thurn. Recipes for many other new dishes will be given away free at each session, and other dishes will be described and their importance and place in the home menu discussed.

Mrs. Thurn in planning the cooking school with The Herald has urged that an invitation be extended broadly to every woman in this community. Her work in past years has shown her the importance of economical marketing and cookery, of careful planning and deliberate buying not only of foods but in home furnishings as well. These subjects as well as new ideas in entertaining will be important parts of the daily program.

FOLLOW WHITE HOUSE

"We could do no better than to pattern our behavior after that of the first lady of the land—Mrs. Roosevelt," said Mrs. Thurn. "Simple meals, carefully planned and well cooked are the fare at the White House. Why not make them the rule in our own homes? Not only because such meals are more economical, easier to plan and cook and serve, but because simple cookery is the best for all of us; and incidentally smarter this year."

The Herald agrees with Mrs. Thurn that no sounder principles of homemaking can be followed than those which she will discuss and demonstrate next week in the big, free Cooking School. Watch for the daily announcements about the school, and plan now for plenty of free time next week, to attend every session, as our guests. It is free, no tickets, no charge of any kind at any session.

'NEW DEAL'

permitted the vast sections of our population to exist in an un-American way, which permitted a maldistribution of wealth and of power.

"One thing is very certain, we are not going back either to the old conditions or to the old method."

Mr. Roosevelt paid his respects to critics of the New Deal. These fall into two classes, he said, those who merely criticize without offering anything in an alternative way, and those who disagree with what is being done but suggest something constructive in its place. The former class he held to be "unpatriotic."

The immediate need, the president asserted, "is to get more people on payrolls at 'purchasing wages'."

CROWN POINT JAIL

Crown Point Jail, Lake-co, Indiana, authorities had boasted of the "fool proof" qualities of their jail when Dillinger was locked up there a month ago, following his capture at Tucson, Ariz., on January 25, but despite all the precautions Dillinger kept his boast that he'd get out. Photo shows the county jail from which Dillinger fled Saturday.

N. AND W. TO EQUIP CARRIERS FOR AUTOS

To facilitate the loading and unloading of automobiles and as an added convenience for shippers and receivers of motor cars, the Norfolk and Western Railway today announced that it will equip 100 of its all-steel auto box cars with automobile loading and unloading devices.

The equipment, an innovation in its field, will be assembled as soon as possible and installed at the Roanoke shops.

The apparatus, the statement said, will greatly expedite the loading and unloading of automobiles and will permit the loading of four machines in a single box car instead of three, the usual number now loaded.

The device, which will be a permanent installation, consists of two platforms inside of the box car, one in each end of the car. The automobiles are placed on the platforms after being loaded into the box car through the side doors. They are then anchored to the platforms to prevent shifting. The platforms are hoisted to bring the top of the machines as close to the roof of the box car as practicable. In the raised position the platforms are supported from the floor by means of struts. This arrangement allows other cars to be loaded on the floor and partially under the automobile anchored to the raised platforms. The cars resting on the floor are also anchored to prevent shifting in any direction.

JANGLED NERVES

Those penciled scrawls are a sign of jangled nerves

If you're the stolid, phlegmatic sort of person who doesn't feel things very deeply, you'll probably never have to worry about nerves. But if you're high-strung, alive, sensitive—watch out. See whether you scribble things on bits of paper, bite your nails, jump at unexpected noises—they're signs of jangled nerves. So be careful. Get enough sleep—fresh air—recreation. And make Camels your cigarette. For Camel's costlier tobaccos never jangle your nerves—no matter how steadily you smoke.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS
Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand of cigarettes!
